Dedication

William C. Cuthbertson

"Neither rain, nor hail, sleet or snow ...". Bill visited the cemeteries, transcribed the tombstones, and compiled fifteenth years of that work into the Crawford County Tombstone Transcriptions. A considerable task, ... an enormous amount of work. The Tombstone Transcriptions are probably Crawford County's most important genealogical book.

Jessie Smith Cuthbertson

It is probable that her interest in the family history led to identification of cemeteries and tombstones of the Cuthbertson's and Smith's as they were scattered around the county. The Cuthbertson and Smith notebooks evolved into the Crawford County Tombstone Transcriptions. Jessie's name is listed as enumerator somewhere in almost every cemetery's transcription.

Ernie Stevens

As noted in the Tombstone Transcriptions, Ernie "contributed many hours to locating and getting through to the 'lost' burial places on farms and in the woods." As a former Sheriff "his knowledge of Crawford County and it's people was a most valuable asset."

Frieda McKenney

The original copy of the Mount Olive Cemetery was done by Mrs. Frieda McKenney. Some of the rain, sleet, and snow is hers. She too, knows the amount of work necessary to generate a book of the size of the Tombstone Transcriptions.

On the bright side ...

An inscription on one stone bids visitor's to the local cemetery ...

" W E L C O M E " .

On the sad side ...

An inscription on a stone for a five year old ...

" Winkin, Blinkin, and Nod
Rode off one night
On a wooden ship".

And in between ...

An inscription reads ...

"To our beloved husband and father
Cowardly murdered
during the miners strike of 1921-22
for having loyally upheld
the cause of justice".

Guide to the Tombstone Transcription Index.

The purpose of the Index is to consolidate the names in William C. Cuthbertson's "Crawford County Tombstone Transcriptions" into a single file, thereby providing a researcher with direct reference to the information inscribed on the tombstones in Crawford County, Kansas.

The Crawford County Tombstone Transcriptions is a lot-by-lot, row-by-row, section-by-section, cemetery-by-cemetery listing of the names, birthdates, deathdates, memorial poetry, and sometimes the names of relatives.

There are 136 cemeteries which include:

- 31 Major cemeteries (100 or more persons)
- 59 Smaller cemeteries (less than 100 persons)
- 6 Indian burial grounds
- 40 Sites of unknown graves.

The Transcriptions are organized by cemetery, hence, essentially 136 chapters, with each chapter containing it's own surname index, a map of the cemetery layout, and usually interesting and valuable introductory comments by William Cuthbertson.

This Index provides:

- - - FULL NAME OF THE DECEASED
Brown Jonathan Livingston.	1826	1912	GIR	87

Brown Jonathan L see Livingston...	----	----	Gir	87
- - - CROSS REFERENCE
	BIRTHDATE	- - - -	'
	DEATHDATE	- - - -	- - -
	CEMETERY CODE	- - - -	- - -
	PAGE-	- - - -	- - - -

i.e., Jonathan Livingston Brown, born 1826, died 1912 is listed in the Girard (GIR) Cemetery chapter of the Transcriptions on page-87.

In the Transcriptions, each cemetery chapter re-starts page numbering at page-1. Most cemetery chapters contain unnumbered introductory pages which this Index identifies simply as "i1, i2, ..., iN". Sometimes just "i" when only one such introductory page is provided.

The 136 cemeteries have names varying in size, all having too many alpha characters to list in the column space available. All cemeteries have been assigned name code abbreviations as closely associated with their names as possible, and are listed in Table-1; Crawford County Cemetery Name Codes.

i.e., Girard = GIR
Cherokee = CHE
etc.

Also-known-as (aka) names for the cemeteries are listed in the Transcriptions to aid identification. Old records and vernacular names change over the years. Villages, hamlets, and later coal camps would spring up at section line cross-roads, or near a creek, ..., were used for a time, then disappeared. In the meantime, people died and were burried. Where? Probably in a convenient burrying ground as in early days and then later in the organized cemeteries as they developed.

Up to the 1860's and 70's, there were few towns and few cemeteries. Some incorporation dates are available for the early cemeteries. Most of the cemeteries have gravesites which were "move-in" reburrials from family burrying grounds. Deathdates then, may precede the organizational date.

Maybe, when enough people had died, an organized cemetery system evolved. Notes in the Transcriptions mention that after a wife or child had died, the husband would donate land for a public cemetery.

It is doubtful that all of the early pioneers passing through this part of the "Great American Desert" from the early 1800's into the 1860's, were in need of cemeteries. This 60 plus years in which the wanderers and early settlers burried their dead is not mentioned in the Transcriptions.

Prior to the 1850's hunters and travelers must have burried their dead where they fell. What did the Indians do? These places are probably lost.

During the 1850's, serious settlers "squatted" the land, sereptiously built their cabins but were moved-out and burned-out by the federal troops during the civil war. Deaths during this period would have developed the family burying ground, but these too appear to be lost when the people were moved out.

The settlers were restrained to the Cato area, south of Fort Scott during the Civil War. This area should have produced cemeteries, but only a few are identified. It could be that the cemeteries in what is now south Bourbon County were used.

The credits for this Index probably goes to the people who died and made all of this possible and to the relatives, most of which provided the tombstones. Some relatives did not. There are many unidentified graves. There seems to be an addage, ... that if you want to know who's burried there, you better put your name on it.

Without the works of William C Cuthbertson, Jessie Smith Cuthbertson, Ernie Stevens, and Frieda McKenney, the Crawford County Tombstone Transcriptions would not exist.

There are probably more errors in this Index than is desirable. The Tombstone Transcriptions were carefully "proofed" by William Cuthbertson. Many editorial marks were provided to caution the reader about spelling and engraving errors. A number of errors were made by the engravers, the family may or may not have realized the mistake. And of course the telephone numbers listed on the tombstones are probably not valid anymore. The translation of the Transcriptions to this computerized index may have caused an error or two.
